The victim positively identified Mr. Smith as the person who stole his property.

Poultry

Live poultry, especially baby poultry, commonly carry Salmonella germs. People can get Salmonella from contact with the birds or their environments. These germs can contaminate a bird's body and anything in the area where they are displayed or housed, such as cages or coops.

In recent years, many outbreaks have been linked to handling live poultry purchased from agricultural feed stores and mail-order hatcheries. In these outbreaks thousands of people became ill, hundreds were hospitalized, and several deaths occurred.

"Even healthy-appearing chickens and ducks can carry germs that are potentially harmful to humans, especially children," says Tennessee Department of Health Epidemiologist Tim Jones, M.D. "We recommend families enjoy the many means of celebrating this season, but leave handling of live poultry to people trained in their appropriate care.

Poultry, such as baby chicks, seem to arrive in feed stores and co-ops just in time for Easter, but this is simply a coincidence as spring and summer is a typical breeding season for chickens. TDA and the Tennessee Department of Health are working together to distribute information to feed and farm stores by supplying posters with information on proper handling of poultry that can be displayed for their customers.

"We're working with farm and feed suppliers to ensure the protection of both the animals and people who may come in contact with them," said State Veterinarian, Charles Hatcher.

"We want to support poultry projects and production uses such as backyard flocks and FFA and 4-H projects while also informing the consumer."

Do not let children younger than five, elderly persons, or people with weak immune systems handle chicks, ducklings or other live poultry. If you do come into contact with live poultry, wash your hands thoroughly with soap and water immediately after.

It's important to protect the welfare of the animal as well as the human. Caring for animals requires long term commitment. Many people who buy poultry as a gift sometimes forget this fact. And remember, it is illegal to dye a chick a different color.

Jacobs

Deputy Chris Hutchens, LCSO was dispatched to Caldwell Road for a physical domestic in which the subject was trying to get a gun to harm himself or the victims on the scene.

One victim was physically restraining Boyd Jacobs from going into the house to get a pistol. During the time he was being restrained Boyd head butted the victim busting his lip. The argument started over Mr. Boyd Jacobs prescription Ambien, he and another victim were arguing over the amount he had.

Another victim and her husband and two others became involved in the arguments and Boyd told them all to leave that it was none of their business and they declined concerned for his well being.

At this point, Mr. Jacobs stated he would get something that would make them leave. All five victims believed that Boyd meant he was going to get his gun and he started to go into the house and was detained by the first victim while another went into the house and got the pistol Boyd was going for and disassembled it.

Officers arrived on scene and Boyd Jacobs initially refused to be treated but later was transported to the ER citing back pain and was treated and then taken to jail.

Hardy

Deputy J. Pistole, LCSO was on patrol on Hwy 11 near the Star riding academy and came up on a white Saturn Ion that was parked partially in the road on Hwy 11. The deputy activated his lights and pulled behind the vehicle. The deputy made contact with the driver, Morgan Nicole Hardy, she stated she was stopped because she had run out of gas and was attempting to contact Onstar from inside the vehicle. While speaking with Ms. Hardy the deputy could smell an odor of an alcoholic beverage coming from inside the vehicle. Ms. Hardy performed poorly on sobriety tasks and is only 18. The deputy observed in plain view a large glass bottle of Malt Liquor in the passenger side floor board. During an inventory the deputy found more alcohol and in the glove compartment found a clear wrapper from a cigarette pack that was partially melted and contained a small crystallized substance believed to be Molly, a schedule I narcotic. She also refused a BAC test.

Morgan Nicole Hardy, 18, of Allen Shore Drive, Lenoir City, was charged with underage driving while impaired, possession of alcohol by a minor, possession of schedule I narcotic (Molly), and violation of implied consent law.
