Report from Thailand Part 3: It Takes a Village

On a hot afternoon near the seaside resort town of Pattaya—known as one of the world's leading sex tourism destinations—preteen and teenage boys and girls lounge on the tile floor in a large common room watching a video.

About This Series

The FBI and other U.S. federal agencies are working closely with the government of Thailand and the Royal Thai Police to fight the scourge of human trafficking and the child sex trade in Southeast Asia. FBI.gov chronicles the efforts in a four-part series called Report from Thailand.

Scripture: Luke 17:11-19

As lepers, these ten would have been pushed out of their communities as unclean. Yet with each other they had a little community together. Leprosy and necessity bound them together; whether they were Samaritans or not made little difference.

In this story as in many others in Jesus' ministry, Jesus is not just healing the physical disease. When the lepers are healed from their disease, they can also be restored to their communities. And if they can return to their communities—where will the Samaritan go? Where will he go if the community of belong-

Thailand

Part 2: A New Emphasis on Helping Child Victims

Part 3: It Takes a Village

To an uninformed visitor, this might be a day camp or community center. In fact, it is the Haven Children's Home, and the nearly 30 youngsters living at the shelter are all victims of appalling crimes—abandonment, physical abuse, forced labor, sex trafficking.

In most cases, the needs of these children continue long after police arrest those who abused them. The shelter represents one small piece of a larger victim services network that includes law enforcement, the court system, social workers, medical personnel, and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) that provide funding for places like Haven Children's Home.

Through its overseas office in Bangkok, the FBI works with all these groups to further investigations and to help get justice for young victims. Such a multidisciplinary approach—working in tandem with an integrated team of providers—has proven effective in the U.S. and is increasingly being applied in Thailand. For Sudjai Nakhpian, who runs the Haven Children's Home and has devoted her career to improving the lives of child victims, the concept is a simple one: "We have to help the children," she said, "because the children cannot help themselves. We have to work together."

Thai and migrant children are typically placed at the shelter by the courts. They can range in age from toddlers to teens and can stay as little as a few months or as long as a decade or more. Haven Children's Home is funded by A21, an independent, global non-profit whose mission is to end human trafficking.

"Southeast Asia has one of the highest rates of child trafficking in the world, and, unfortunately, poverty and lack of education makes that possible," said Malina Enlund, A21's Asia director. "The scope of the problem is huge."

Sudjai Nakhpian runs the Haven Children's Home in Pattaya, Thailand.

Sudjai Nakhpian runs the Haven Children's Home in Pattaya, Thailand, a resort town with a reputation as one of the world's leading sex tourism destinations.

Thailand is one of the wealthiest and most developed countries in the region and attracts destitute migrant families from less developed countries such as Laos, Cambodia, and Myanmar. "And of course, that leads to exploitation," said Enlund, who has worked in Thailand on behalf of trafficking victims for the past eight years.

Exploitation can take the form of children being prostituted or made to work for cheap wages under deplorable conditions. Some migrant parents are so desperate to feed their families that they rent or sell a child to traffickers who send the youngsters out on the street to beg or to work in the sex trade.

"We are talking about thousands of children," Enlund said, and in the case of migrants who have no documentation, they are extremely difficult to help because they are essentially unknown. "If they are trafficked from Cambodia or Myanmar and have no papers," she said, "we are basically looking for children that don't exist."

Malina Enlund, Asia director of A21, talks about the challenges posed by child sex trafficking in Thailand and working together with other NGOs, law enforcement agencies, and the Royal Thai Police.

"The demand for children is growing, and it's being fueled by technology."

Thai children, many who live on the street, are also targeted by traffickers and pedophiles from the U.S. and other Western nations. "Right now, Pattaya has one of the largest number of pedophiles anywhere in the world living outside their home countries," Enlund said. And they are not only having sex with children, they are producing child pornography and posting it on the Internet.

Internet forums for pedophiles and pornographers on the so-called Dark Net are expansive and growing, she said, explaining that pedophiles routinely share information online about how to acquire children in Thailand. "With the Internet, we are living in a global community," Enlund said. Pedophiles anywhere are now "five clicks away from finding a child to abuse. Child sex tourism is growing," she added. "The demand for children is growing, and it's being fueled by technology."

The presence of the FBI, the Department of Homeland Security, and other U.S. law enforcement agencies in Thailand has helped in the fight against child trafficking, Enlund believes. "The U.S. government I have seen that provides that amount of help to assist children on the ground—and you not only support looking for perpetrators who are American, you also support child sex tourism victims, and that is the only agency that I know of that does that."

Amad Cousar, 47, Old Bridge Lane North Carolina, was charged with DUI, and Violation of Implied Consent.

Deputy Kevin Dailey LCSO, was dispatched to I40 East bound at mile marker 367 in reference to a vehicle crash. Upon arrival Deputy came in contact with the driver Amad Cousar who appeared unsteady on his feet with an odor of an alcoholic beverage about his person. The vehicle a 2007 white Chevrolet Trailblazer was upside down across both lanes with multiple beer cans scattered throughout, a passerby stated he observed Mr. Cousar throw something into the median which was later determined to be 3 beer cans. Mr. Cousar agreed to field sobriety where he performed poorly, he was also read Implied Consent where he refused to give blood. He repeatedly stated that he needed to flip the vehicle back over so he could drive it back to Charlotte, also during pat down he was soaked in beer on his shorts and bottom of his shirt. The vehicle was towed by Moneymaker's and Mr. Cousar was taken into custody for Driving Under the Influence and Violation of Implied Consent where he was transported to the Loudon County Justice Center without incident.

dren's Home, Enlund said, "it is a place where children learn to become whole again. Once they know their boundaries and feel like they are protected within those boundaries, they can thrive and go to school and have a normal life. It's our hope that we can find families for these kids at some point," she added. "Every child deserves a family."

Trafficking in Thailand: Signs of Progress

The U.S. Department of State's annual Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Report is said to be the world's most comprehensive resource regarding anti-human trafficking efforts. The 2016 report states that while "sex trafficking remains a significant problem in Thailand's extensive commercial sex industry," the country is making "significant" progress to deal with its trafficking issues.

"Thailand is a source, destination, and transit country for men, women, and children subjected to forced labor and sex trafficking," the report said. "Thai victims of trafficking and some of the estimated three to four million migrant workers in Thailand are forced, coerced, or defrauded into labor or sex trafficking."

The TIP report ranks countries in three tiers according to the seriousness of trafficking offenses and the extent to which govern-serial number with a loaded magazine. Sisk advised it was his gun. The truck was a blue dodge with a trailer with a silver ford mustang, Female advised the ford was her car and had been broken down and they had come to pick it up. The registration on the ford came back to a Chevy blazer. Deputy ran the VIN on the ford and it came back not stolen. Deputy ran Sisk by name and date of birth and he came back revoked. Mr. Sisk was also found to have a warrant out of Bradley County for failure to appear. While talking with Wilson it was observed that she was very upset. Deputy Lane and Deputy Ketter escorted Wilson back to Deputy Ketter's car and placed her in the back seat. After placing her in the car a small brown box was found lying where Wilson was standing. Inside the box was a clear plastic bag with Crystal substance inside. Wilson advised she knew nothing about the substance. Deputy asked Sisk about the box and he advised it was his Meth that he had given it to Wilson to hide for him when Deputy stopped the car. Deputy weighed the substance and it was about 3.83 grams. Wilson was asked about the container and she stated she had it inside her pants and when she was getting into the car she allowed it to fall out to attempt to hide the box.

ments are addressing the problem. In 2014 and 2015, the report ranked Thailand in the third tier, among the world's worst offenders. This year's report marks an improvement, placing the country on the Tier 2 Watch List, noting that while Thailand has "severe forms of trafficking," it is making "significant efforts."

Among the TIP report's recommendations for Thailand:

Increase efforts to identify victims among vulnerable populations, including migrants, stateless persons, children, and refugees;

Prosecute and convict traffickers through proactive law enforcement and systematic cooperation with civil society;

Increase training and resources for multidisciplinary teams; and Continue to develop specialized law enforcement and social welfare services for child sex trafficking victims.
