A Look Back: A Small Office with a Big Mission

The FBI's World War II-Era Cover Company at Rockefeller Center

Everyone knows that the holiday season is well under way when the giant Christmas tree is lit at Rockefeller Center in New York City. What is less well known, however, is the connection between Rockefeller Center and the birth of America's civilian foreign intelligence efforts.

It was 1940 and the world had plunged into war the previous summer. Although America remained neutral at that time, it did not ignore the massive international threat, and an FBI operation—small but critical to Ameri-

in both the lane of travel and the shoulder. Deputy did stop said vehicle on Interstate 40 at the Watt Road exit ramp where he identified the driver as Cynthia Michelle Sutherland. When Deputy asked Cynthia for her License, registration, and proof of insurance she began to fumble for an unusual amount of time before producing the documents requested. Deputy did observe a strong odor of an alcoholic beverage emitting from the vehicle and Deputy asked Cynthia how much alcohol she had to drink. She stated that she had two "airplane bottles" of Fireball approximately one hour prior to my contact with her. Deputy asked Cynthia if she would be willing to perform Standardized Field Sobriety and she consented. Cynthia performed poorly on all tasks and was placed under arrest for Driving Under The Influence and transported to the Loudon County Jail. A check of her license revealed that her license is currently Revoked for Driving Under The Influence and she has a prior ca's response to that threat—was centered in the heart of New York City in Rockefeller Center. It was called the Importers and Exporters Service Company and operated out of room 4332 at 30 Rockefeller Center—the RCA Building—beginning in August 1940.

Mission

Importers and Exporters was the Bureau's first attempt to set up a long-term cover company for our covert program, the Special Intelligence Service (SIS). The SIS was the United States' first civilian foreign intelligence service and was less than a year old. Under a 1940 agreement signed by the Army, Navy, and FBI and approved by President Roosevelt, the FBI was given responsibility for "foreign intelligence work in the Western Hemisphere." This saw us gathering intelligence about espionage, counterespionage, subversion, and sabotage concerns—especially about Nazi activities—pertaining to civilians in South America, Central America, and the Caribbean. We were to create an undercover force that would proactively protect America's security from threats in our international neighborhood. Given that our past success was mostly in criminal matters, taking on this task would be a steep learning experience.

To begin, we wanted to center the operation away from traditional FBI facilities and wanted to anchor it in commercial efforts, because they would provide the freedom of movement and access our agents would need. Although it is not clear why the Bureau chose to establish a presence at 30 Rock, it likely had something to do with the support that Nelson Rockefeller had provided to President Roosevelt's intelligence work. Furthermore, on multiple occasions after the SIS's creation, our personnel were afforded cover by Nelson Rockefeller's Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

The RCA Building placed the FBI within a hotbed of foreign activity, both allied and enemy. The Rockefellers provided space in the same building at little or no cost to British Security Coordination, an intelligence agency/liaison service. It also hosted Italian, German, and Japanese tenants until the U.S. government detained them as enemy aliens when America entered World War II. And the Soviet Union had office space in the building as well.

Of course, the sign on the door did not read "FBI/SIS—Spies Welcome." Instead, the Importers and Exporters Service Company—which never imported or exported anything—was supposed to be completely unidentifiable with the Bureau and would provide "backstopping" or cover identities, employment, and other necessary tools for our agents to operate undercover. With these new identities, representatives of the company were to travel throughout the hemisphere to collect intelligence and help to disrupt the Axis threat.

It looked good on paper; however, the plan took an unexpected turn because Bureau personnel had to fend off daily advances from unsuspecting salesmen and other parties knocking on the door wanting to do business with the new company. The FBI ended up shutting down the Importers and Exporters business in June 1941, but we kept the office itself open until November 1945, using it to quietly handle logistics for deploying SIS personnel.

Although the Importers and Exporters Service Company was a short-lived enterprise, its method of operation, providing what is known as "non-official cover" in the spy see Mission conc. pg. 7 business, became crucial to the SIS's intelligence activities and its subsequent successes. Learning from its Importers and Exporters experience, the Bureau—instead of maintaining one single cover company—enlisted the assistance of accommodating U.S. companies that agreed to provide cover jobs for Bureau personnel. (And in a boon for some of those companies, many of the individuals who filled these positions worked so enthusiastically that they became nearly indispensable to their cover employers.)

Room 4332 at 30 Rock and what went on there more than 70 years ago is little remembered now—the room itself doesn't even exist anymore because the floor it was located on has an open plan today. However, those who enjoy the Christmas tree and skating rink at Rockefeller Center during the holiday season might take a minute to reflect on the building's role in America's first civilian foreign intelligence service.

Revoked

Mark Melton, 43, Veteran Road Sweetwater, was charged with Driving on Revoked/Suspended License, Simple Possession, and Poss. of Drug Para. Deputy Lance Anderson LCSO. observed a black jeep cross over the white line on I75 near the 76 mm leaving the road of travel. Upon traffic stop Deputy identified the driver as Mark Melton. A check of Melton through dispatch reveal his license were suspended. Upon inventory of the vehicle Deputy located a section of a red drinking straw, digital scales with a white powdery substance on them, and a Tylenol bottle with one white pill, and 2 half white pills identified as Hydrocodone/Acetaminophen. Mark Melton was transported to the Loudon Jail.

Governor Haslam, Commissioner Boyd Announce Sparks Custom Fabrication, LLC to Expand in Adamsville

Foodservice equipment manufacturer to create approximately 140 jobs Tennessee Gov. Bill Haslam, Economic and Community Development Commissioner Randy Boyd and Sparks Custom Fabrication, LLC (SCF) officials announced today that the manufacturer will expand in McNairy County. SCF will create approximately 140 jobs in Adamsville during the next five years.

"SCF is a home grown success story that shows why Tennessee is the place to start and grow a business," Haslam said. "Tennessee's skilled workforce allows our existing businesses to thrive, especially companies like SCF that have carved out a market for the kinds of well-crafted products that Tennessee is known for around the world. Thank you, SCF, for creating about 140 new jobs in Adamsville and bringing us another step closer to our goal of making Tennessee to No. 1 location in the Southeast for high quality jobs."

"Manufacturing plays a crucial part of McNairy County's economy. About 40 manufacturing operations call McNairy County home and they provide jobs for roughly 1,000 residents — jobs that are among the county's highest paying," Boyd said.

"An injection of nearly 140 new manufacturing jobs by SCF will be significant and create a considerable long-term boost for McNairy County and its citizens. On behalf of Team Tennessee, I'd like to thank SCF for deciding to double its jobs in Adamsville with this expansion."

SCF specializes in millwork, stainless steel, stone and refrigeration products used by the food industry. SCF's customers include restaurants, schools, the military and hospitals across the country. All of SCF's foodservice equipment is custom made, ranging from hot and cold food bars, serving counters, stainless shelving and other products.

"This expansion will provide opportunities for SCF to grow our business in the foodservice equipment industry," SCF President Nathaniel Sparks said. "The company's growth is a direct result of our employees' quality and attention to detail for our customers. We thank the Tennessee Department of Economic and Community Development and the city of Adamsville for supporting our efforts to hire and train new employees locally with a specific skill set needed to manufacture our custom-made-to-spec products."

SCF opened in Adamsville in 2013 and currently has 120 employees. SCF will add 10,000 square feet of warehouse space to its existing 100,000-square-foot facility. The expansion and new hiring is needed to sustain the company's existing growth into the future.

"This is big news for McNairy County. SCF is a growing company and its decision to expand in Adamsville will give it an opportunity to increase production and provide even more jobs in the future," McNairy County Mayor Ronnie Brooks said. "We are extremely pleased SCF is expanding and look forward to working with its leadership as we strive for a better future for our citizens and the region."

"We're excited to see Nathaniel Sparks continue growing his business," Adamsville Mayor David Leckner said. "Sparks Custom Fabrication is a nationally known brand in the foodservice industry. The city of Adamsville is thrilled to celebrate this announcement of new jobs and the expansion of the building."

"This is very exciting news for the city of Adamsville and McNairy County. We are so happy to have partnered with the TNECD Cabinet, their regional staff, the city of Adamsville and the Adamsville IDB to help make this expansion happen," Eddie Crittendon, CEO of the McNairy County Economic Development Council and Chamber of Commerce, said. "We appreciate the investment that SCF is making in our county. We're excited that they put their trust in us and will be members of our industrial family for years to come. We wish them much success going forward."

Adamsville and McNairy County are represented by Sen. Dolores Gresham (R — Somerville) and Rep. Ron Gant (R — Williston) in the Tennessee General Assembly.
