Child Sex Tourism

Alaska Man Receives Prison Term for Crimes Committed in Cambodia

A tip to police from a concerned citizen in Anchorage, Alaska led to an FBI investigation that stopped a sexual predator from victimizing children in Cambodia—and landed the offender behind bars for a lengthy sentence.

In March, a federal judge sent 45-year-old Jason Jayavarman to prison for 18 years for attempting to sexually exploit children in Cambodia over a period of years and attempting to arrange a child sex tourism trip there for himself and others.

Jayavarman's crimes were "horrific," said Special Agent Jolene Goeden, who investigated the case from the FBI's Anchorage then went after the vehicle and it did take off at a higher rate of speed. Deputy then turned his lights and sirens on and the vehicle vehicle did run from me. As the vehicle was fleeing someone in the vehicle did throw several natural ice cans in the road and a straw hat with john deer on it was found in the road on

Hines Valley near Brezealle Rd. Deputy did loose sight of the vehicle near New Providence Rd. on Hines Valley. Deputy then advised Deputy Dailey to sit on Hwy 70 near the county line. The vehicle then came out Hwy 70 back into Loudon County and turned onto Carters Chapel Rd. The vehicle a dark gray 2010 Chevy Camaro also ran from Deputy Dailey and wrecked out in a curve. There were no injuries to any one in the vehicle. There were two passengers in the vehicle and they stated they asked the diver to stop the first time Deputy tried to traffic stop (see chase ctd. pg. 7)

TN that it is now rated AAA by Standard & Poor's Ratings Services. S&P conducted a mid-year review and upgraded Tennessee's rating from AA+ to AAA. The other two rating agencies, Moody's Investors Services and Fitch Ratings, have provided Tennessee with their highest ratings of Aaa and AAA, respectively, since 2010.

S&P's report cited Tennessee's strengthening economy, growing reserves, positive year-to-date performance, and continuous sound management of its long-term liabilities.

Tennessee's preliminary unemployment rate for April 2016 was 4.3%, which is below the U.S. preliminary rate of 5%. Additionally, the Tennessee General Assembly recently appropriated an additional $100 million to the state's rainy day fund, increasing the fiscal year 2017 balance to $668 million.

These first-class ratings will translate into lower interest rates when the state borrows money, and may result in substantial savings for taxpayers.

"For the first time since 2000 and for only the second time in state history Tennessee has a triple triple-A rating from the credit ratings agencies, one of 11 states to receive this status," Gov. Bill Haslam said. "The state's Rainy Day Fund is more than double what it was in 2011, and we have the lowest debt per capita of any state, no transportation debt and recently recorded the lowest interest rate in state history. The balanced budget the General Assembly just passed takes on no new debt. This historical accomplishment is a result of the strengthening Tennessee economy and the conservative fiscal strategy implemented by the General Assembly, constitutional officers and this administration. Today's news from Standard and Poor's will save Tennesseans' tax dollars and allow us to continue our efforts to provide the best possible service at the lowest possible cost."

"Tennessee has one of the lowest debt burdens in the country and our elected officials are committed to living within our means," Comptroller Justin P. Wilson said. "Our triple triple-A status is an extraordinary achievement that benefits all Tennesseans."

"Tennessee's low taxes, excellent balance sheet, and reasonable regulations have helped create one of the best business environments in the nation," Secretary of State Tre Hargett said. "The Governor and General Assembly should be commended for the state's financial management."

"Tennessee has one of the highest funded pension plans in the nation, and the General Assembly has appropriated money to fully fund employer contributions since 1972," Treasurer David Lillard said. "The management of our long-term liabilities contributes to these outstanding ratings."

Division. In 2012, the Bureau was contacted by the Anchorage Police Department after a Crime Stoppers tip alerted the police to the possibility that Jayavarman was making frequent trips to his native Cambodia to have sex with children—an illegal act.

A preliminary investigation revealed that Jayavarman, who owned and operated a popular youth hostel in Anchorage and who has dual citizenship in the U.S. and Cambodia, had made at least a dozen such trips between 2010 and his arrest in 2013. During that time, it was later learned, he produced videos of himself having sex with a child victim.

As part of the investigation, an undercover source posed as a man interested in a child sex tourism trip. Over a period of months, Jayavarman “talked very openly about production of child pornography in Cambodia, how to smuggle that pornography back into the U.S., and about his FBI ctd. from pg. 5 connections in Cambodia and how he could procure young children for his friends—some as young as 12 years old,” Goeden said.

Jayavarman was arrested before he could travel overseas again, “but he had purchased his tickets along with those of the undercover source he believed would be accompanying him,” Goeden noted.

A search of Jaya-

varman’s house revealed child pornography, and from that evidence, investigators were able to identify one of the child victims in Cambodia. “We tracked her down in a mountain village in the middle of nowhere,” Goeden explained, “and we were able to interview her.”

Investigators learned that the victim was 14 years old when Jayavarman first began sexually abusing her. A year later he began making pornographic videos with her and ultimately recorded more than eight hours of him having sex with the girl.

After his arrest, Goeden said, Jayavarman discussed how it was common for extremely poor, young Vietnamese and Cambodian girls to be traded to traffickers by their families for food. Many are brought from their rural villages to the Cambodian capital, Phnom Penh, which is where Jayavarman had first met the young victim.

“He was definitely a predator,” Goeden said. During recorded conversations with the undercover source, “Jayavarman went on in detail about how to groom a child and what to do to a child,” she said. “It was incredibly graphic and very disturbing.”

Child sex tourism is a serious crime, Goeden added, “and it happens more than we realize. Some people think that what they do overseas can stay overseas, but that is not the case. The FBI is serious about stopping those who sexually exploit children, no matter where the crimes are committed.”
