IC3

being reported to the IC3 did increase in 2015 from the previous year, anecdotal evidence strongly suggests that there are many other instances of actual or suspected online frauds that are not being reported, perhaps because victims didn't know about the IC3, were embarrassed that they fell victim to a scammer, or thought filing a complaint wouldn't make a difference. But the bottom line is, the more complaints we receive, the more effective we can be in helping law enforcement gain a more accurate picture of the extent and nature of Internet-facilitated crimes—and in raising public awareness of these crimes.

The FBI field offices taking part in the billboard campaign include Albany, Buffalo, Kansas City, Knoxville, New Orleans, New York City, Phoenix, Oklahoma City, Salt Lake City, and San Diego. They were selected because they house multi-agency cyber task forces that participate in an IC3 initiative called Operation Wellspring. This initiative connects state and local law enforcement with federal cyber resources and helps them build their own cyber investigative capabilities, which is important because not all Internet fraud schemes rise to the level necessary to prosecute them federally. We hope to expand Operation Wellspring to other FBI offices in the future.

Through the Wellspring initiative, IC3 personnel—using the complaint database and their analytical capabilities—create intelligence packages focused on particular geographic regions. These packages can highlight trends, identify individuals and criminal enterprises based on commonalities in complaints, link different methods of operations back to the same organization, and detect various layers of criminal activities. The packages also contain results of preliminary investigative research performed by IC3 analysts, including criminal records checks.

Once complete, these intelligence packages go to the appropriate FBI cyber task force and are then handed off to state and local task force members trained to investigate these kinds of crimes.

“IC3 is often the first piece of the investigative puzzle.”

Donna Gregory, unit chief, IC3

Beyond Operation Wellspring, the IC3:

Forms alliances with industry representatives (online retailers, financial institutions, Internet service providers, etc.) that have increased the flow of the IC3's most valuable commodity—information.

Makes its complaint database available to all sworn law enforcement (and FBI personnel) through the Bureau's secure Law Enforcement Enterprise Portal. Accessing the database, users can get information on victims and financial losses within their particular area of jurisdiction to help build cas-

Schedule:

10:00 – 11:30: open house/backstage tours

11:30 – 1:00: Clarence Brown's "Smouldering Fires" 16mm film screening with live musical accompaniment by Freddie Brabson on the Mighty Wurlitzer Organ

1:00 – 2:30: open house/backstage tours

2:30 – 3:30: Short PBS documentary on the Knoxville Sessions followed by Tennessee Archive of Moving Image and Sound's "Silent Stomp" film with live music accompaniment by Todd Steed

"Smouldering Fires" is a 1925 Universal Pictures silent film, directed by Knoxville's Clarence Brown. This rarely screened drama was thought lost until a copy was discovered on an ostrich farm outside Johannesburg, South Africa. Ahead of its time in its depiction of an independent factory owner and her love for a younger man, it's yet another film in Brown's oeuvre that reinforces his reputation as a "woman's director." Following Smouldering Fires he went on to work with such stars as Joan Crawford, Katherine Hepburn and Elizabeth Taylor, and made seven films with Greta Garbo, who called Brown her favourite director.

Introducing the film will be author Reed Massengill, whose forthcoming book on Brown will be published by University of Tennessee Press. Massengill's personal 16mm film print of the film will be screened, a rare opportunity to see a silent film projected at the majestic Tennessee Theatre. Live music accompaniment to the film on the mighty Wurlitzer organ will be provided by Tennessee Theatre Associate House Organist Freddie Brabson, who delivered such a marvellous performance during last year's screening of "Stark Love."

Local musician Todd Steed will be reprising his self-composed live score accompanying vintage film footage of Knoxville during the 1920s and 1930s. "Silent Stomp" was met with much acclaim at this year's Knoxville Stomp festival, its archival home movies and photographs allowing viewers a glimpse at what Knoxville looked like at the time of the historic Brunswick-Vocalion recording sessions at the St. James hotel in 1929-1930. Look out for footage of downtown Knoxville, the old Market House, popular local musicians of the era and more. Preceding the half hour "Silent Stomp" film will be a seven-minute PBS-produced video on the "Come To Make Records" exhibit at the Museum of East Tennessee History, exploring the history of the 1929-1930 recording sessions.

Before and between the screenings, from 10-11:30 a.m. and 1:00-2:30 p.m., the Tennessee Theatre will be available for an open house and backstage tours.

Vicky Underwood, 61, Allen Road Lenoir City, was charged with Domestic Assault.

Deputy Lance Anderson LCSO, responded to Allen Rd. in reference to a domestic assault. Upon arrival Deputy made contact with Vicky Underwood, the offender. The offender stated her son's girlfriend, had struck her in the head with a cell phone. Deputy observed no visible injuries to the offender. Deputy then made contact with the victim. The victim stated the offender came into her bedroom and started arguing with her about her boyfriend. The victim stated the offender then started grabbing clothes from her closet and throwing them in the front yard. Deputy did observed several articles of clothing in the front yard. The victim denied striking the offender but stated the offender struck her several times during the argument. Deputy did observed several scratches and red marks on the victim's right arm, neck, and face. The injuries appeared to be consisted with an assault. The offender was determined to be the primary aggressor, taken into custody, and transported to the Loudon County Jail without incident. Both parties refused any on scene medical attention. All occurred in Loudon County, TN.

es. Authorized users can also run a variety of statistical reports for themselves and can contact the IC3 for additional analytical assistance.

Publishes an annual report highlighting the numbers and common types of complaints, along with emerging trends. The most recent 2015 Internet Crime Report described the three major fraud types reported to the IC3 last year—business e-mail compromise, e-mail account compromise, and ransomware.

Produces periodic public service announcements to alert consumers about the latest and/or emerging cyber crimes and provide tips on how to recognize them. Recent announcements covered tech support scams, stolen identity refund fraud, and the continuing threat from business e-mail compromise schemes.

Explains IC3 Unit Chief Donna Gregory, "IC3 is often the first piece of the investigative puzzle. We receive victim complaints and then analyze, aggregate, and exploit those complaints to provide law enforcement with comprehensive reports that can be used to open new investigations or enhance existing ones."

So if you or someone you know may have been victimized by a cyber fraudster, please submit a complaint to the IC3. And for additional information on filing a complaint, please review the IC3's Frequently Asked Questions page.
