Nursing Home Owner Bills Medicaid for Personal Expenses

Money Spent on Entertainment, College Tuition, Western Wear, Restaurants, Etc.

Mabry Healthcare & Rehab Center in Gainesboro, Tennessee included more than $2 million of non-allowable expenses on its annual Medicaid cost reports, which were used to calculate the nursing facility's reimbursement rates. This amount included money that was spent for the personal benefit of the owner and her immediate family members.

Comptroller auditors discovered that Mabry Healthcare included personal expenses and expenses unrelated to resident care on the facility's cost reports for five consecutive years. These expenses included hundreds of thousands of dollars spent at discount stores, restaurants, home improvement stores, furniture stores, department stores, beauty and nail salons, etc.

Auditors determined that Mabry Healthcare also claimed for reimbursement $322,500 paid to a business run by the owner's husband, $33,162 spent on college tuition and books for the owner's daughter, and $1,184 used for the owner's daughter's wedding.

Other non-allowable expenses included $176,619 in gift card purchases and activation fees, $81,070 in personal legal expenses, and $92,308 in personal or unsupported travel expenses.

Auditors also reported that Mabry Healthcare inappropriately charged its residents for haircuts, shampoos and diapers, which are Medicaid-covered services and items.

Auditors have adjusted the facility's reimbursement rates and determined that Mabry Healthcare owes the State of Tennessee's Bureau of TennCare $1,243,724.41. The facility also owes some of its residents $16,632.43.

"It goes without saying that nursing homes should never claim personal expenses on a cost report," said Comptroller Justin P. Wilson. "State and federal tax dollars serve their highest use when they benefit the patients and residents in these facilities."

About the Film

Earlier this year, the FBI and DEA released a documentary called Chasing the Dragon: The Life of an Opiate Addict, which focused on educating students and young adults about the dangers of opioid addiction. The 45-minute film—the title of which refers to the never-ending pursuit of the original or ultimate high—features stark first-person accounts by individuals who have abused opioids or whose children have abused opioids, with tragic consequences.

While there have been numerous law enforcement successes in targeting the supply side in the war against drugs, demand has continued to grow. The film brings awareness to the worrisome trend of a growing epidemic of prescription opiate and heroin abuse, especially among young people.

Haslam Announces Labor Education Alignment Program Grants

LEAP Grants support Drive to 55 by aligning workforce needs with higher education

Tennessee Gov. Bill Haslam today announced the recipients of the Labor Education Alignment Program (LEAP) competition, a state initiative that supports the Drive to 55 by awarding grants to community and academic partnerships formed to help communities align workforce needs with higher education.

"If we can eliminate gaps in the skills needed by local manufacturers and other companies and the types of degrees and courses offered by local community and technical colleges, we can strengthen our workforce to meet industry demands," Haslam said. "These LEAP grants help create programs that tie specific training and skills to current workforce needs, helping more Tennesseans qualify for good, high paying jobs. This is a key piece of our Drive to 55 campaign to increase the number of Tennesseans with a postsecondary degree or credential to 55 percent by 2025."

The General Assembly appropriated $10 million in the 2016-17 fiscal year budget for LEAP grants. Below is a list of recipients:
