challenge

a series of fun, interactive activities.

Anyone can visit the website and learn all about cyber safety, but teachers must sign up their school to enable their students to take the exam and participate in the national competition. Once enrolled, teachers are given access to a secure webpage to enroll their students (anonymously, by numeric test keys) and request their test scores. E-mail customer support is also provided. Top-scoring schools each month are recognized by their local FBI field office when possible.

All public, private, and home schools with at least five students are welcome to participate. Now entering its fifth season, the FBI-SOS program has seen increased participation each year. From September 2015 through May 2016, nearly a half-million students nationwide finished the activities and took the exam. We look forward to even more young people completing the program in the school year ahead. The challenge begins September 1.

The FBI's Safe Online Surfing (SOS) Internet Challenge for students in third through eighth grades is available at <https://sos.fbi.gov>.

A Sampling of Teacher Comments from the 2015-2106 School Year

"We have been in your program for the last three years and have gotten good response from the students and parents about your program."

"Thank you for providing a wonderful learning experience for students."

Chicago Cold Case Seeking Justice for a Murdered Teenage Girl

Thirteen-year-old Alexandra Anaya was brutally murdered 11 years ago this month, and today the FBI's Chicago Division—in close partnership with local authorities—marked the anniversary by requesting the public's assistance to help to solve the case.

The Indiana teen, known to friends and family as Alex, was reported missing from her home August 13, 2005—she was last seen by her mother early that morning. Three days later, boaters on the Little Calumet River in Chicago found her dismembered body floating in the water.

Both the Chicago Police Department (CPD) and the Hammond Police Department in Indiana conducted an exhaustive investigation at the time and have continued to follow leads since, but Alex's killer

Alexis Ambrocio, 31 Adoka Lane Knoxville, was charged with Driving without License, Prohibited Weapon, and Evading Arrest.

Deputy Lance Anderson LCSO, observed a black Dodge Caravan displaying GA tag traveling on I 75 N without a working right side headlight. Deputy initiated my blue lights for a traffic stop on the vehicle at approximately the 79MM. The above vehicle slowed but refused to stop. Deputy initiated my siren with my blue lights and the vehicle continue North without stopping. The vehicle passed approximately two miles of safe roadway to pull over and stop. The vehicle came to a stop at the 81 exit. Upon contact with the driver, Alexis Ambrocio, he stated he did not have a valid drivers license. This was confirmed by dispatch. Upon consent to search the vehicle a piece of aluminum was found in the floor at the driver's area. The piece of aluminum had been fashioned into a club like weapon made to inflict serious bodily injury with no lawful purpose or use. The weapon was seized and placed into evidence. The driver was taken into custody and transported to the Loudon County Jail without incident. The vehicle was left at the scene. Citation #13962 was issued. All occurred in Loudon County, TN.

Cold case ctd. from pg. 5 remains at large. Her case is one of many now being reviewed by FBI Chicago's recently established Homicide Initiative Task Force.

"We believe this was not a random act of violence and that Alex knew her assailant," said FBI Chicago Special Agent in Charge Michael J. Anderson during a press conference today in Chicago. "It has been more than a decade since Alex was murdered, and during that time people and relationships have changed. We are hopeful that someone will come forward now," he added.

2016 to help local authorities solve some of Chicago's most violent murders. Task force members re-examine cold cases with a fresh perspective and take advantage of the most current scientific techniques and forensic processes.

"The homicide rate is extremely high in Chicago," said Special Agent Courtney Corbett, a task force member who works alongside CPD detectives and other FBI personnel. "Because there are so many homicides here, a cold case could be 20 years old or a murder that occurred six months ago."

CPD homicide detectives often have caseloads that are overwhelming, Corbett said. "The task force is here to provide specialized assistance and help in any way we can." That assistance translates into FBI resources such as enhanced DNA testing, telephone record analysis, surveillance, and the deployment of Bureau experts, including dive team personnel and members of the Behavioral Analysis Unit—commonly called profilers.

In Alex's case, Corbett said, "we have been reviewing leads and re-interviewing individuals associated with this case. The DNA evidence has been well preserved, and we plan to use enhanced technology to exploit that evidence." She added that task force members are fully invested in finding the killer. "We want to bring justice to Alex and other victims like her, and their families," Corbett said. "To do that—and to ultimately reduce the homicide rate in Chicago—we all have to work together."

Anyone with information regarding the murder of Alex Anaya—no matter how insignificant they think it might be—is asked to contact the FBI's Chicago Field Office at (312) 421-6700 or submit a tip online.
