Scripture: Romans 4:1-5, 13-17

All our lives are shaped by how much we earn through our work. Where we live, who we know, how we shape and clothe our bodies—practically nothing is untouched by our wages. We work hard to win our due, so most of us are naturally protective of what's ours. The world judges us by how much we can gather for ourselves. But there are no wag-

Binary Options Fraud

A Word of Warning to the Investing Public

Stock options. It's a pretty common investment term meaning, in general, that one party sells or offers to another party the opportunity to invest by buying a particular stock at an agreed upon price within a certain period of time. All perfectly legal and highly regulated—and if the investor takes advantage of the opportunity and the stock performs well, there's money to be made. And if the stock doesn't perform well, the investor knew the risk. But here's another similar-sounding financial term that the public should be wary of—binary options. While some binary options are listed on registered exchanges or traded on a designated contract market and are subject to oversight by U.S. regulators like the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC), much of the binary options market see Fraud pg. 3 operates through websites that don't comply with U.S. regulations. And many of those unregulated websites are being used by criminals outside the U.S. as vehicles to commit fraud.

Binary options fraud is a growing problem and one that the FBI currently has in its crosshairs. In 2011, our Internet Crime Complaint Center (IC3) received four complaints—with reported losses of just more than $20,000—from binary options fraud victims. Fast forward five years, and the IC3 received hundreds of complaints with millions of dollars in reported losses during 2016. And those numbers only reflect victims who reported being fleeced to the IC3—the true extent of the fraud, which has victims around the world, isn't fully known.

Emily Howey, 22, Sheets Hollow Road Greenback, was charged with Simple Possession x2, and Poss. of Drug Para.

Cpl. Chris Hutchens LCSO, did come across a beige Nissan sedan, sitting in the dead end of the road to the fishing pier on Jackson Cemetery. The vehicle was running with the parking lights on, and had two passengers inside. The driver, later identified as Emily Howey, and the passenger, a male, began to have lots of furtive movement as soon as they saw him, and as Deputy approached the vehicle he could smell the odor of marijuana emitting from the vehicle.

While speaking to the pair, in the center cup holder was a Mcdonald's cup, on the lid of this cup, Deputy could see in plain view a dime sized piece of marijuana. Deputy asked both Howey and male if there was anything illegal in the vehicle, to which both stated no, at which point Deputy asked about the marijuana. Deputy asked them both to exit the vehicle and inside the jacket that Howey was wearing was a clear bag, with approx. 4 grams of marijuana inside.

Howey stated that it was hers, as well as a marijuana pipe that was still inside the vehicle. Howey also explained that she was on probation in Blount county for similar charges. Where the glass pipe was located, in the center console, was also found a small box. Inside that box was a small bag that contained approx. half a gram of Meth. Howey stated that it belonged to her child's father, and that she had told him to get rid of it. She explicitly stated the male had no knowledge of it being in the vehicle, as well as the marijuana and pipe belonging to her. Howey was arrested and transported to the Loudon County Jail. The male called for a ride and left the scene, and the vehicle was towed by Malone's. This did occur in Loudon County.

Some European countries have reported that binary options fraud complaints now constitute 25 percent of all the fraud complaints received.

What exactly is a binary option? It's a type of options contract in which the payout depends entirely on the outcome of a yes/no proposition, typically related to whether the price of a particular asset—like a stock or a commodity—will rise above or fall below a specified amount.

Unlike regular stock options, with binary options you're not being given the opportunity to actually buy a stock or a commodity—you're just betting on whether its price will be above or below a certain amount by a certain time of the day.

For example: You expect the price of an individual stock will be above $80 at 3:30 p.m. today. So you buy a binary option that allows you to place this bet at a cost of $60. If, at 3:30 p.m., the stock price is $80.01, your payout is $100, for a profit of $40. If the price of the stock at 3:30 is $79.99, you lose your $60. Of course, you can buy multiple binary options, which can significantly increase your winnings as well as your losses.

So where does the fraud come into it? The perpetrators behind many of the binary options websites, primarily criminals located overseas, are only interested in one thing—taking your money. Complaints about their activities generally fall into one of three categories:

The perpetrators behind many of the binary options websites, primarily criminals located overseas, are only interested in one thing—taking your money.

Refusal to credit customer accounts or reimburse funds to customers. This is usually done by cancelling customers' withdrawal requests, ignoring customer phone calls and e-mails, and sometimes even freezing accounts and accusing the customers themselves of fraud.

Identity theft. Representatives of binary options websites may falsely claim that the government requires photocopies of your credit card, passport, driver's license, utility bills, or other personal data. This information could potentially be used to steal your identity.

Manipulation of trading software. Some of these Internet trading platforms es in the kingdom of heaven. In faith, God sets us free of needing to earn our way; all are freely showered with unimaginable gifts of mercy. When we see our lives from God's perspective, we no longer have to worry about comparing ourselves to others. No one has to work to be worthy. God's grace overturns all our economies.

Prayer: God of Abraham, set us free from all our anxieties and comparisons. Help us to see that, through Christ, all people are worthy of your abundant love. Amen.

may be reconfiguring the algorithms they use in order to purposely generate losing trades, often by distorting prices and payouts. For example, if a customer has a winning trade, the expiration time is extended until the trade becomes a loss.

Fraudulent binary options website operators go to great lengths to recruit investors. They advertise their platforms—often on social networking sites, various trading websites, message boards, and spam e-mail—with big promises of easy money, low risk, and superior customer service. Potential investors are also cold-called from boiler room operations, where high-pressure salespeople use banks of phones to make as many calls as possible to offer “once-in-a-lifetime” opportunities.

What's being done to combat binary options fraud? The FBI currently has a number of ongoing binary options fraud cases, working with partners like the CFTC and the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). And this past January, the Bureau organized the 2017 Binary Options Fraud Summit held at Europol in The Hague, bringing together law enforcement and regulators from throughout North America and Europe to discuss the growing binary options fraud problem.

Special Agent Milan Kosanovich, who works out of our Criminal Investigative Division's Complex Financial Crimes Unit, was one of the FBI's representatives at this gathering. “The summit," he said, "gave all of us the chance to sit down and talk about what we've discovered through our respective binary options fraud investigations, where the challenges are, and how we can all work together."

One of the biggest challenges law enforcement faces, according to Kosanovich, is the fact that the scammers are sophisticated and have operations spanning multiple countries. "So the key to addressing this type of fraud," he continued, "is national and international coordination between regulatory agencies, law enforcement, and the financial industry."
