Avoid Fraudulent Charitable Contribution Schemes

Federal authorities are issuing warnings to potential donors wishing to aid victims of Hurricane Harvey that unscrupulous scammers may set up shop in the storm's wake.

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) and the U.S. Computer Emergency Readiness Team (US-CERT) this week warned that phishing scams and bogus e-mail solicitations may target potential givers. US-CERT warned users to be cautious when handling unsolicited e-mails with subject lines, hyperlinks, and attachments related to Hurricane Harvey. And the Department of Justice (DOJ) on Wednesday issued a reminder to be vigilant about potentially fraudulent activity on the heels of a disaster.

wrong way on Highway 411. Deputy made contact with Sonya Massingale who was asleep in the driver's seat. She stated that she had wrecked her car 3 hours ago and fell asleep waiting on someone to help her. Mrs. Massingale did not know where she was or where she was going, and could not find her Identification. Mrs. Massingale did have large pupil size and I asked Mrs. Massingale to step out of the vehicle to perform field sobriety tasks and she performed poorly. Mrs. Massingale was very unsteady on her feet and seemed very confused. Mrs. Massingale did state that she had taken

Alprazolam (Xanax) earlier this date, and consented to a search of her vehicle which revealed several prescription bottles of which there was one pill bottle without a label that contained 6 Al-prazolam pills which she did not have a prescription for. Mrs. Massingale was read implied consent and submitted to a blood draw at Fort Loudon ER. Mrs. Massingale did give blood and it see meth ctd. pg. 5

Charged

Bradley Williams, 25, Lake Forrest Drive Lenoir City, was charged with DUI, Contraband in Penal Institution, and Violation of Implied Consent.

Sgt. J. Dishner LCPD, was dispatched to a suspicious vehicle at 911 Hwy 321 N., (Walmart). The complainant advised that a silver Volkswagen was sitting on the market side with a male subject that appeared to be under the influence. Upon arrival, Officer found the vehicle matching the description parked next to a cart return stall.

Officer observed a male subject sitting in the drivers seat, with the keys in the ignition and he appeared to be passed out or asleep. Officer woke the male up and identified him as Bradley A. Williams. Mr Williams had slurred speech and had trouble following his directions. He stated he had been drank several, tall boy cans of beer.

Officer asked Mr. Williams to step from the vehicle and complete a series of Field Sobriety Tests to determine his level of intoxication. Upon his exit from the vehicle he was very unsteady on his feet and smelled of an alcoholic beverage. Mr. Williams preformed poorly on given field sobriety tests and was placed under arrest for DUI.

After being read his Tennessee Blood and/ Breath Consent Advisement, Mr. Williams refused to consent to either test in violation of TCA 55-10-407. Upon arrival at the Loudon County Jail, Mr. Williams was thoroughly searched by Deputy Garner of the Loudon County Sheriff's Office. Deputy Garner located a white plastic bottle hidden in Mr. Williams' underwear.

After searching the bottle Officer found 3 1/2, yellow oblong pills that appear to be Xanax. Mr. Williams did unlawfully take a controlled substance into a penal institution in violation of TCA 39-16-201. This did occur in Lenoir City, Loudon County, Tennessee.

“E-mails requesting donations from duplicitous charitable organizations commonly appear after major natural disasters,” said US-CERT, an organization within the Department of Homeland Security that analyzes and responds to emerging cyber threats.

“Be alert for charities that seem to have sprung up overnight in connection with current events,” the FTC warned.

The National Center for Disaster Fraud, which was established by the Justice Department to investigate fraud in the wake of Hurricane Katrina, said in press release this week that tips regarding suspected fraud should be reported by phone to (866) 720-5721 or online at disaster@leo.gov.

gov. Suspected Internet-based fraud can also be reported to the FBI’s Internet Crime Complaint Center, or IC3, at www.ic3.gov.

To assist those seeking guidance, the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) tweeted a link to “trusted sources for helping out with #Harvey,” which takes users to the website for National Voluntary Organizations Active in Disaster. The Virginia-based non-profit group describes itself as an “association of organizations that mitigate and alleviate the impact of disasters” and counts many well-known national aid organizations among its members. FEMA also posted a link to a list of the organization’s members in Texas.

“Criminals can exploit disasters, such as Hurricane Harvey, for their own gain by sending fraudulent communications through e-mail or social media.”- National Center for Disaster

Fraud

The agencies offered these tips (among others) to individuals who are considering making donations:

Donate to charities you know and trust.

Designate the disaster to ensure your funds go toward disaster relief.

Never click on links or open attachments in unsolicited e-mail.

Don’t assume that charity messages posted on social media are legitimate. Research the organization.

Verify the legitimacy of any e-mail solicitation by contacting the organization directly through a trusted contact number.

Beware of organizations with copycat names similar to but not exactly the same as those of reputable charities.

Avoid cash donations if possible. Pay by credit card or write a check directly to the charity. Do not make checks payable to individuals.

Legitimate charities do not normally solicit donations via money transfer services. Most legitimate charity websites end in .org rather than .com.

Make contributions directly, rather than relying on others to make a contribution on your behalf.

After Hurricane Katrina hit New Orleans and the Gulf Coast region in 2005, the immediate devastation was followed by years of complaints of fraud. In the four years after Katrina, the fraud task force—consisting of more than two dozen local, state, and federal agencies, including the FBI—received more than 36,000 complaints. By 2009, more than 1,300 individuals had been indicted Lindsay Lowery, 28, Ponderosa Drive Lenoir City, was charged with Theft of Property, Criminal Impersonation, and Criminal Trespass. Officer C. Espinoza LCPD, was dispatched to Walmart in regards to a theft. Upon arrival Officer made contact with Loss Prevention who stated Ms. Lowery was walking through the store for hours acting suspicious. Loss Prevention stated she was rendering the merchandise unusable or unsellable. Ms. Lowery walked out of the business without paying for several items. During the course of investigation Lowery told Officer her name was Brittany and gave someone else id to Officer. It was later learned that she was Lindsay Lowery. Lowery had on her possession a controlled substance that tested positive for methamphetamine. Lowery was transported to the Loudon Jail.

was sent the lab for testing. When we arrived at the Jail Mrs. Massingale was asked if she had anything on her person that would be considered contraband in the jail and she stated that she did have something in her bra. Mrs. Massingale was searched in the jail and a baggie with a crystal substance (believed to be Methamphetamine) was found in her bra. Mrs. Massingale was charged with Driving Under the Influence, Simple Possession of Schedule IV, and Possession of Methamphetamine. This did occur in Loudon County Tennessee.

for Katrina-related crimes.

If charitable giving after past disasters is any indication, millions of aid dollars will flow in the coming weeks and months to areas affected by Harvey's damaging storms and flooding. Federal agencies want to make sure those contributions end up where donors intend, and not in the hands of criminals.

"Unfortunately, criminals can exploit disasters, such as Hurricane Harvey, for their own gain by sending fraudulent communications through e-mail or social media and by creating phony websites designed to solicit contributions," the National Center for Disaster Fraud warned.

Perrye Turner, the special agent in charge of the FBI's Houston Division, echoed these warnings: "As we all work to rebuild the Houston/Gulf Coast region and look for ways to help, it's important to perform due diligence before giving contributions to anyone soliciting donations or individuals offering to provide assistance to those affected by Harvey, whether the solicitations are in person, via e-mail, or by telephone," Turner said in a statement. "The FBI is dedicated to investigating and preventing this type of fraud, especially when it involves preying on individuals during times of great need."

Brandin Gage, 31, Foster Road Lenoir City, was charged with Domestic Assault.

Deputy JC Schultz LCSO, answered a physical domestic call at Foster Rd. Upon arrival Ms. Brandin Marie

Gage stated that her boyfriend whom she co habitates with, victim and herself had argued (over the car and the cell phone) and he had broken her necklace, then she scratched his neck to defend herself. Victim stated that he did not break her necklace and that they had argued then she scratched his neck. Ms. Gage had no marks on her and victim had a long scratch on the right side of his neck.

Ms. Gage was deemed the primary aggressor and placed under arrest then transported to the Loudon County Jail without incident. This did occur in Loudon County, TN.

PI and possession x3

Diann Foutz, 52, Front Street Lenoir City, was charged with Public Intoxication, and Simple Possession x3.

Officer Jason Arden LCPD responded to investigate a suspicious person complaint. Upon arrival Officer made contact with a female matching the description given by the complainant, and identified her as Diann Foutz, who appeared disoriented, very unsteady on her feet, had red watery eyes, and demonstrated difficulty while speaking. Foutz appeared to be a danger to herself if left in public.

During a search of Foutz located on her person were 53 white oblong pills and 4 orange capsules identified as Gabapentin. Also located in a bottle inside the vehicle 1/4 orange pill identified as Busprenorphine. Foutz does not have a prescription for. Officer noticed Foutz fumbling around in the back seat of the patrol vehicle on the way to the jail. Officer located a baggie with green leafy substance believed to be marijuana in the seat where Foutz was seated.
